

November 8th, 2022

GENDER, PLANNING, AND THE CITY: A MODERN CALL TO ACTION FOR THE FIELD OF PLANNING

Natalie Isobel DeBloeme Barcellos and Kaitlyn Bisch

1

AGENDA

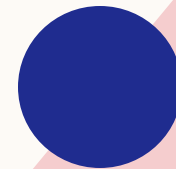

Introduction

Positionality

Methods

Results

Calls to Action

INTRODUCTION

Understanding the relationship between Gender and Urban Planning within the field of academic research.

Research Questions:

- 1) Between 1990 and 2022, how has the sub-field on gender, planning, and cities changed?
- (2) Of the literature that exists on planning, gender and cities, what are the gaps and limitations?
- (3) To what extent has the research conducted thus far engaged with feminist theories from socially subordinated groups, such as Black Feminism, Trans theory, and Intersectionality?

POSITIONALITY

METHODS

Time frame

Data Base

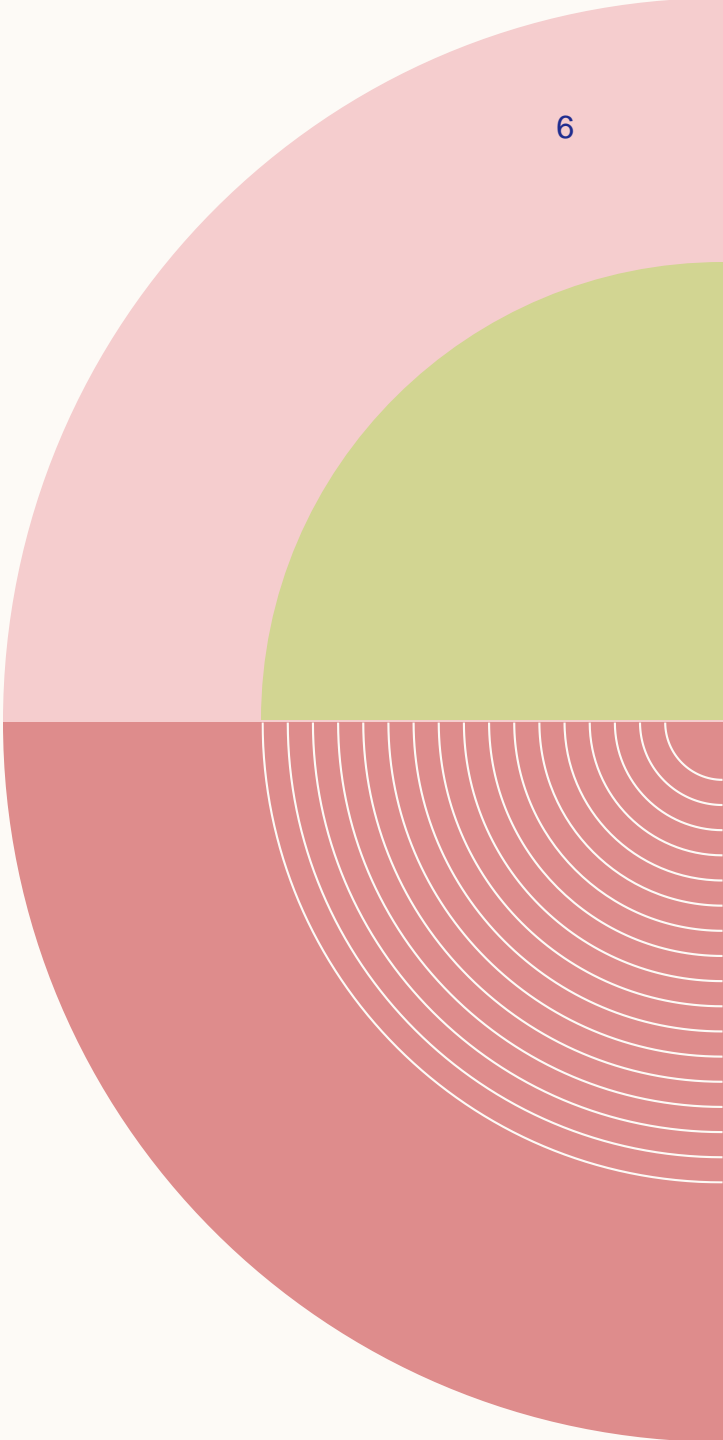

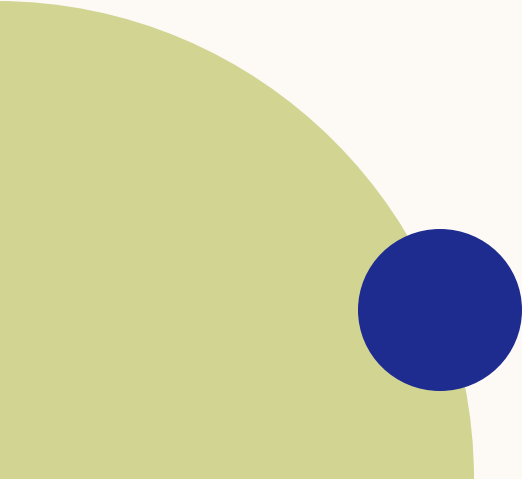

Search String

Supplementary Articles

RESULTS

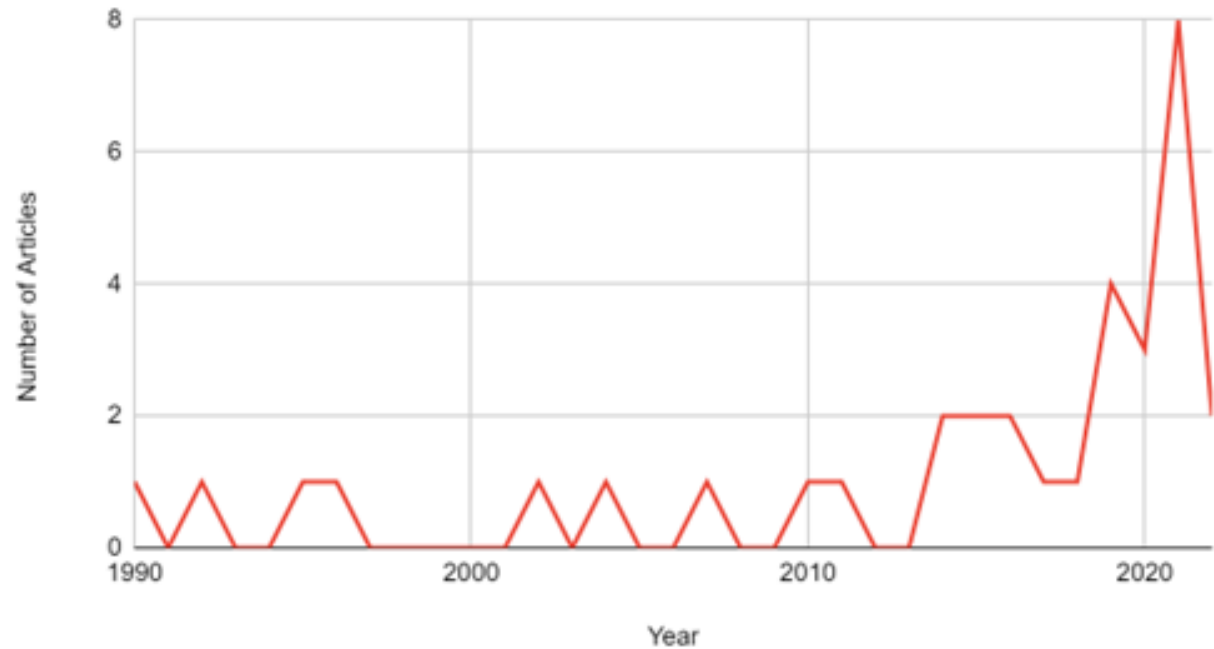

RESULTS

Chronology

Volume

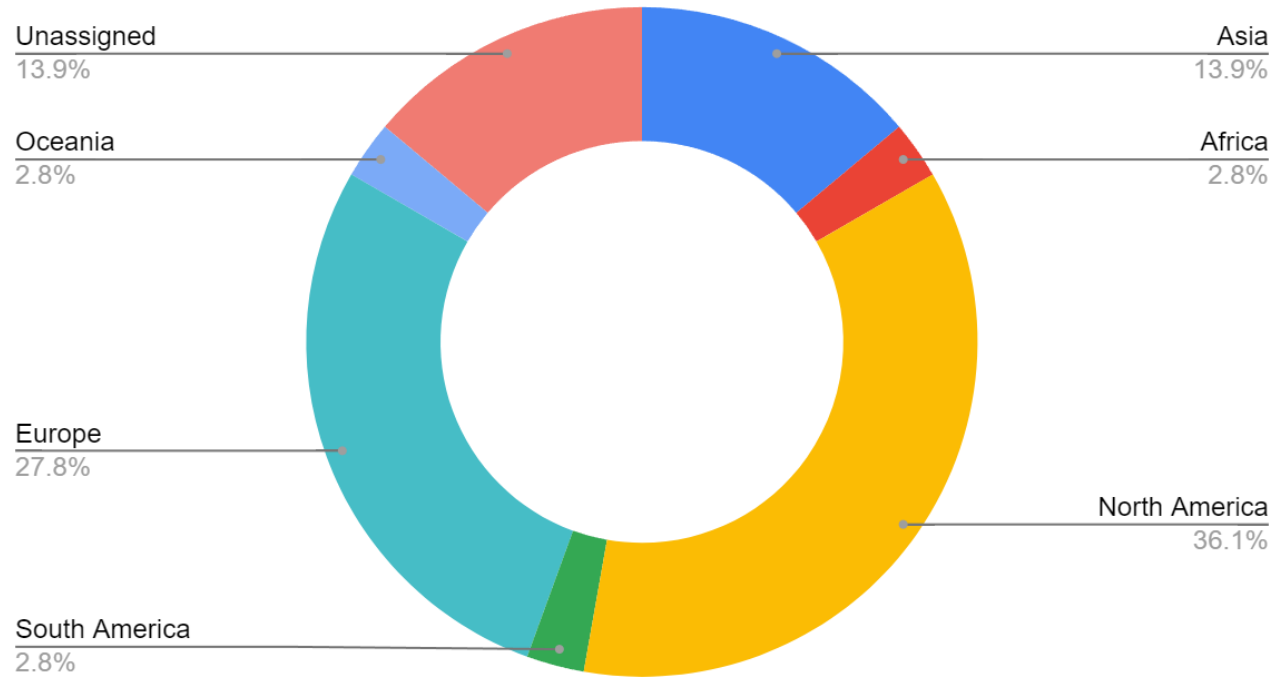

The term 'Gender'

Publication Years of Articles

RESULTS

Percentage of Article by Continent

Geographic Scope

Theories and Language Used

Topics Discussed

CALLS TO ACTION

- Planning scholarships to more actively engage with a gendered lens and perspective that more accurately reflects the renewed societal focus on justice and equity;
- Concerted efforts at the institutional level to support, enable, expand, and fortify opportunities for equity deserving scholars to research the intersections of gender and planning; and
- Greater collaboration between bodies of practicing planners and planning scholars to promote and incorporate a gendered lens that is intersectional.

THANK YOU

